"Our Town" by J. B. WHITE

Some day somebody somewhere will be moved to utter a warning against the unlicensed multiplication of legal holidays. The more holidays we get, the less inclined people are to take them seriously. A few enthusiastically observed would be better for the object intended than many indifferently celebrated or neglected altogether. New Year long ago lost its significence for most people. Even the public schools usually do not close for Lincoln's birthday or for Columbus day. Comparatively few observe Thanksgiving as a religious festival. Even Memorial day has become more a touring and outing those who died in war.

If legal holidays are to be merely occasions for escaping work they might as well be distributed evenly through the year. It would simplify matters, for instance, to have a specified day of every month made a legal holiday, taking its name in case from some historic anniversary occuring within the month.

The tendency, of course, is always to multiply, never to decrease the the number of holidays. We may ignore a holiday, but we never legislate it out of existence; and it is small honor to a hero or an historic event for the public generally either to neglect the hoflday set aside in commemmoration or to turn the celebration into channels foreign to its original purpose.

Who will be the first seriously to suggest revision of holiday schedules in the interests of a harassed and confused mankind?

So long have public speakers, especially "educators" thought attacking the press the proper thing to do—like waving the flag and flattering the audience—it is comforting to the Fourth Estate and to readers in whom love for the family newspaper still smoulders to find a university professor who, admitting that there is a little bad in the worst of us, still finds a great deal of good in the newspapers of today.

Professor Sidney Bradshaw Fay, of Harvard University, answers the question of how "to preserve the heritage of freedom received from Washington" with the suggestion that "we preserve a good, reliable and honest press and also by trying ourselves to judge carefully and critically what we read in the papers."

He describes the newspapers of the United States as the most informative in the world, which amounts to an admission that they are eminently successful in fulfilling a duty impos-

The Record of Jesse James In the Legislature of Texas Is Record of Service to the People and their Needs

JESSE JAMES

The welfare of the people of his district and all Texas has been the major concern of Representative Jesse James, candidate for re-election, and his record in office is a Record of Service to the People.

At no time has Mr. James forsaken his conceptions of duty to those who elected him to this important post in the Legislature, and any attempt to misrepresent his record is the work of the uninformed and those who would try to make favor with the people they so grossly deceive.

Mr. James beileves that a Public Office is a Public Trust and the investment of confidence in him by the people of the District has been rewarded with faithful performance of duty and an honorable record of service to the people.

In recent days there has been circulated throughout the District an attack upon the record of Mr. James which in reality is nothing less than a false picture drawn from the distortion of the facts and a shameful neglect of the truth. Friends point out that Mr. James has made a record on which he is justified in asking the people to re-elect him; that when taken in its entirety his record is

Tyler Man Owns 10,000 In Noted Indian Collection

One of the largest and most complete collections of Indian relics and tools in this section has been gathered by Bill Jenkins, South College avenue and West Elm street.

The collection contains about 10,000 pieces and has been twenty years in the making, according to Mr. Jenkins. "When I was a kid about 12 years old," he said, "I lived near Chattanooga, Tenn. About 10 miles from home there was a Cherokeen Indian reservation. We used to take our lunch out on Saturleys and wander around through the weeds looking for arrowheads, knives, etc., and I guess that's what started me. I've been at it ever since."

There are many Indian collections, Mr. Jenkins explained that are infinitely larger than his; but he says he believes that for completeness and variety of articles included, his would be hard to surpass.

Indian Knives

One of the rarest parts of his collection is a small case of what are known to students of Indian lore as "corner tang knives," which for the most part are found only within a 40 mile radius of Waco, Texas. A few scattered corner tangs have been discovered in other parts of Texas, but only near Waco are they found in anything like abundance.

TAX TOLL IN TEXAS IS STAGGERING SUM

AUSTIN, Aug. 18.—State Auditor C. F. Sheffield, in a report made public today, found that taxes collected by local units of government for 1935 aggregated $133,429,149.29.

Delinquent taxes were reported as $143,095,807.17, but Sheffield said the figure, due to failure of some units to keep adequate records, might be inaccurate.

The report on tax assessments, collections and indebtedness of counties, cities and various districts was prepared on instructions by the 42nd legislature.

Huge Indebtedness

The indebtedness of counties and sub-divisions was $700,896,845, which comprised $7,196,807.64 in current warrants, $27,308,295.87 in time warrants and $666,391,741.49 in bonds. A reduction of $46,034,580.13 in sinking funds gave a net indebtedness of $647,665,457.23.

Counties bore $160,573,239.91, or 24.79 per cent of the net indebtedness; cities, $223,338,251.82 or 34.48 per cent, and districts, $263,753,981.50 or 40.73 per cent.

New Continental Gin Battery At Weems Gin In Cameron

A new battery of Triple-X Continental Gins were blazing away Wednesday afternoon turning out a bale of cotton every ten minutes. The new battery is a sensation. Mr. Weems had not announced this new advantage to farmers until this week when it was ready to start the season.

The gin is a combination cleaner, huller and extractor. The turnout is amazing, he said, the new gin getting the lint off the seed in a fashion that makes for maximum turn-out on every bale of seed cotton.

The gins are 1936 make, the latest known to the world and the Weems gin was proud of the satisfaction given thus far to farmers who are using the new Continental system.

DEATH RAY GUN IS NEW WAR MACHINE

Kills Animals and Melts Metal at Distance.

San Diego, Calif. — Climaxing months of speculation and waiting, a new machine of war, built to insure world peace, will be exhibited at the California Pacific International exposition, it was announced here.

The new machine, known as the giant death ray gun, has been under construction under the supervision of Prof. Harry May since last October and is the result of more than six years' constant experiment and research.

Professor May admits that the discovery of the death ray was entirely by accident and came when he noticed certain metals in his laboratory became abnormally hot. Checking the reason, he declares he found it possible with an invisible ray to disintegrate metals and other substances from a distance, and with sufficient electrical energy to give enough power over a range of several miles.

The new death ray gun resembles a weird telescope or giant cannon, mounted on an armored gun carriage enclosed with more than 200 square feet of Krupp armor steel. It is 16 feet long, 14 feet high and the projector weighs four and a half tons. Four men dressed in specially insulated suits will man the electric switchboard, which will send 4,500,000 volts of electrical energy into the death-dealing device.

Professor May declares the utmost power of the machine has not been calculated, but in experimental tests it melted sheets of metals, burned balloons, killed small animals, at distances of several hundreds of feet.

While in working order, Professor May declares that certain safety tests are being made prior to showing it to the public.

Glass House Is Wreck When Its Owner Returns

Nyack, N. Y.—Although she had been throwing no stones, Mrs. Evelyn Ward Leigh, who lives in a glass house here and who caused considerable comment when she outfitted her horse with pants, entered the office of a local newspaper today to complain that on returning from Florida she had found her house had been smashed.

"The house is wrecked," she said. "Windows have been broken. The glass in the kitchen roof has been smashed, the front door broken in and every other locked door was opened. In one room they had used tools to gouge the woodwork and rip away the door frames."

Police suspected that some frolicking boys had done the damage.

Cinder Burn Restores Sight to Eye Long Blind

Mount Holly, N. Y.—Twenty-two years ago an accident, while working, deprived Herbert Bowden of the sight of his right eye.

Since then he has visited several specialists and vainly tried various treatments. He has tried to get along with just one eye, but he had to give up his profession of basket weaving.

He was working as a janitor in the Burlington county courthouse building a few weeks ago, cleaning the furnace. A red hot cinder flared into his eye.

He screamed. Doctors were summoned and the eye was treated. When the bandages were removed Bowden almost fainted. He could see with his right eye again.

—in strengthening the banking structure.

EVERY state charters state banks comprising the State Banking System. They are supervised under state laws that supplement and enforce accepted principles of sound banking.

Similarly the Federal government charters and supervises the national banks of which there are many in each state. It created the Federal Reserve System, composed of all National and many State Banks, designed primarily to coordinate and strengthen credit operations of banks; and created the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

While the basic soundness of banks is created by the honesty and efficiency of their own managements, these various government measures brace the financial structure giving it added resiliency and usefulness to the public.

International Harvester Exhibit At Texas Centennal.

Texans and The World See Machinery For Modern Farm.

The International Harvester Company exhibit at the Texas Centennial Central Exposition occupies all the west wing of the Transportation building—an area comprising 10,810 square feet of floor space. This exhibit includes displays of historic and educational interest not only to users of farm machines, motor trucks, and industrial power equipment made by the Harvester Company, but also to all men, women, and children interested in the social and economic progress of the past century.

A replica of the first reaper, built in 1831 by Cyrus Hall McCormick, is on display, as well as models of many of the machines that evolved the reaper. A full sized 16-foot McCormick Deering harvester-thresher is displayed operating slowly so that visitors can see how each part functions. This mighty monarch of the harvest fields can cut, thresh, and clean the grain from 40 to 50 acres a day.

Much of the progress of the past century is a direct result of American ingenuity in perfecting not only the modern grain binder but also a successful method of making satisfactory, low priced binder twine. Although large qualities of twine are used in the wheat sections of Texas, few wheat growers have had an opportunity to see how binder twine is made. Accordingly, throughout each day of the Exposition there are complete demonstrations of the spinning and balling of binder twine—using the same equipment and the same people who operate the machines in International Harvester twine mills. Also in continuous, slow motion operation is the knotting mecahnism of a modern grain binder—showing just how this ingenius invention of 55 year sago, still in extensive use, loops the twine around a sheaf of grain, ties the knot, and then cuts he twine when the knot is completed.

Of interest to the dairyman is a milk cooler, a enw product of the International Harvester, as well as a variety of cream separators and milking machines—several of them in operation and cut away to show their mechanism. An outstanding attraction, of interest to every one, is the mechanical cow—an accurately reproduced Holstein that chews its cud, blinks its eyes, moves its head and ears, switches its tail, breathes, moos and gives milk in a most realistic manner.

Various sizes and types of farm tractors are shown as well as machines of the quick attachable type that are used with these tractors. Throughout each day there are demonstrations of how many of these modern machines can be attached or detached from a tractor in from two to five minutes each. In continuous operation is a tractor-operated two-row cultivator, demonstrating the ease with which the modernly equipped cotton grower can cultivate 25 acres a day—cultivating close to growing crops without damaging them even though the rows may be quite crooked.

There is an extensive display of stationary power units and wheel type an dcrawler type tractors made by International Harvester for use in oil fields, lumbering, road building and maintenance, and for various other industrial purposes. In continuance operation is an International Diesel engine cut away to show how it starts on gasoline and then shifts automatically to operation on Diesel fuel.

An important part of the progress in transportation featured in this building is an extensive variety of motor trucks displayed in the International Harvester wing. These include four and six-wheel trucks with panel, stake, and oil tank bodies, as well as the latest types of school busses.

A complete description of the variety of displays in the International Harvester exhibit would reveal agreat many items of historic interest and educational value not only to farmers but also the city people. The careful fair goer will find that he can profitably spend several hours in the west wing of the Transportation Building studying the many International Harvester displays.

one of which the District should be proud for his every act has been in accord with the high principle that the people have the first claim, and the only claim, upon their public servants.

Let the record as he made it and now stands say whether Mr. Jaces has been faithful to his trust. Discussing his record Mr. James said:

"I wrote and passed through the house (House Bill 46) providing the immediate payment of the old age pension. With a tax on sulphur, oil, gas, public utilities and all the natural resources anl special interests to pay the old age pension. This tax would have raised approximately thirty millions ($30,000,000) of dollars. Would have cost the tax payers of Texas practically nothing because about 85 per cent of the resources are sold out of Texas. This bill passed the house, reference page 159 and 160 second call session of 44th Legislature. Had my bill, House Bill 46 passed the Senate as we sent it to them, every person passed 65 years of age woull be receiving full payment of pensions now.

"It was largely through my work as vice chairman of the committee on taxation in the House that the state ad valorem tax rate of 1936 has been reduced from 77c to 62c, a total relief of fifteen cents. This was done by policies advocated by me in reducing the expenses of the government and shifting the burden to those interests who have not heretofore been bearing their just proportion of the costs of the government.

"As a member of the 43rd Legislature and the 44th Legislature I was constantly opposed to the levy of additional taxes on the actual necessities of life and the reason that in its final analysis such a tax would be an additional burden upon that class of people least able to bear it. I have not brought myself to the belief that the necessities of life, the actual links which bind us to existence, should be further hazarded by the levy of additional taxes. In the 45th Legislature I shall continue my opposition to tax measures on necessities of life.

"At all times I have given a listening ear to the voice of labor and have acted consistently to further the laborer's interest, believing that the government should function for the majority of the people rather than for the majority of the capital.

"I wrote, with the assistance of others, and pushed through to final passage a resolution calling on every member of the Legislature to disclose the names of all corporations or associations, if any, that give them a retainer fee. This of course, is to reveal the corporate connections of members of the Legislature. You can find this information in house journals.

"I wrote with the assistance of others, the present chain store tax law, introduced it and pushed it to final passage.

"My entire record as a member of the Legislature has been one of service to the people and not to the special interests as some would have you believe. The record will say whether I have been faithful to the highest traditions of public service. This record proves all assertions to the contrary to be absolutely false.

"It is a well taken axiom of logic that the longer one serves in the Legilature the more efficient servant one may make. I do not propose by this statement to offer to perpetuate myself in public office. I seek only to submit, that by virtue of my service during the 43rd and 44th Legislatures I am prepared to serve you better in the 45th Legislature.

"I was honored with membership on the following committees: Revenue and Taxation, Vice Chairman; Labor, vice chairman; Bank and Banking, Oil, Gas and Mining; State Affairs; Highway Motor Traffic; State Eleomosynary and Public Health Committee. If re-elected to the 45th Legislature, I will as a member of these committees be in a position to deal in your behalf with the most important problems to confront the law making body. I respectfully ask your vote and support for re-election.

Sincerely yours,
JESSE JAMES.

Indian Collection

Indian lore, found the only specimen of this knife that was ever discovered in Smith county a few years ago. The knife was made and used by the Tonkawan tribe, archaeologists believe, but inasmuch as many different tribes inhabited that section of Texas it is impossible to attribute the knives' origin to any one of them. It is known, however, that they were used long before the coming of the white man.

Pottery Collection

A large amount of various types of pottery is included in Jenkins' collection. Pottery, Jenkins explained, was produced almost wholly by peace-loving tribes, such as the Cherokees and the industrious Caddo tribe that lived in the vicinity of what is now Caddo lake. Some of the pieces are apparently the results of painstaking and artistic labor, having been carefully shaped up and then decorated with intricate patterns and designs before baking. Other specimens of pottery in the group were made probably by the more warlike tribes. They are crudely made and were apparently hurridly done. Warlike tribes made pottery only as necessities an dwasted no time in making it, according to Jenkins.

Probably the most interesting part of the entire collection is the assortment of Indian pipes Jenkins has gathered. Clay pipes, stone pipes —all sorts of pipes in all sorts of peculiar shapes and patterns are displayed in one case. Some of them are rather crudely done while others are the work of skilled artisans.

Drills and Awls

Drills and awls that the red men used centuries ago are in the collection. Some are sharpened bone and some are of finely worked flint. They are a far cry from the modern diamond drill that measures in thousandths of an inch, but they "filled the bill" in their day. Examples of their work are seen nearby in the strings of beadwork. Many of the beads are of stone and some are of bone. Others are of minute shells. Two or three strings of these tinny shells, each about the size of a small pea, have perfectly drilled holes in them about the size of an ordinary pin and are strung neatly on small strings or cords.

Smith and Cherokee counties contributed something unique to the collection—arrowheads and spearheads made of petrified wood. This is a real rarity. Beautifully colored heads, showing clearly the wood's grain and texture, occupy a small part of one large case. Jenkins explained that they were found almost altogether in this section.

Ceremonial Pieces

Bannerstones and boatstones, real rarities in any Indian collection, are numerous in Jenkins' group. Their use is not definitely known, but they are ceremonial pieces of some sort. The boatstones get their name from their peculiar shape, which resembles the hollowed-out "dugouts" the Indians used along with their canoes of bark. The bannerstones in Jenkins' collection are of banded slate, a beautiful blue-grey rock that has parallel bands of larker slate running through it. It will take a high polish, and many of these pieces are worn down smooth and highly polished from use.

Other pieces in his collection include knives, gorgets, copper beads, which are made from copper beaten out flat and rolled up around a small cord, plummets, spearheads of all types, chisels, ear plugs, water bottles, and two Indian skulls washed out of an old burial ground near Waco.

From Wide Area

Jenkins said that his collecting carried him into many southern states, chiefly Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Missouri, and into the East through Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and along the Wabash. The banner stones are found in Ohio, mostly, he said.

One of the oldest groups of his relics is a group of spearheads which he got in LaFlore county, Oklahoma, from Indian mounds there. They were used by prehistoric cliff-dwellers and are believed to be 2,000 years old.

Several axe and hammer heads, some showing the manufacturing process, may be seen also. Two types of drilling were used by the Indians he said; hollow reed and flint. The flint drill was graduated larger towards the handle of the drill and a hole drilled by this method started out large but made only a small hole when it finally pierced the object. The hollow reed drill, however, made a hole that was uniform size all the way through. Several examples of both types of drilling are shown.

BANKING SYSTEM SHOWS PROGRESS

State Bank Resources Grow More Than Three Billion Dollars in a Year

NATIONAL BANKS GAIN

American Bankers Association Gives Details of Banking Institutions and Notes Stronger Condition

NEW YORK.—Continued improvement in the condition of state chartered banking institutions, with an increase of more than three billion dollars in a year in total resources, is shown in a report just issued by the State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association.

The report was prepared by the division's Committee on State Bank Research from data furnished by state banking departments and parallels data issued by the Comptroller of the Currency for national banks which show similar improvements.

"The combined resources of 10,473 state supervised banks were $35,724,723,000 as of December 31, 1935," the state bank report says. "Total deposits amounted to $30,526,920,000. Total loans and discounts stood at $12,430,404,000 and total investments were $14,170,421,000."

A year previous, tables in the report show, there were 10,644 state supervised banks, with combined resources of $32,680,203,000, total deposits $27,297,959,000, loans and discounts $13,060,033,000 and investments $12,582,325,000.

Classes of Institutions

Of the reporting state banking institutions on December 31, 1935, 82% were commercial banks, the report states, 9% trust companies, almost 9% stock and mutual savings banks and less than 1% were private banks. The report adds:

"The parallel upward movements of deposits and total invested funds of total state supervised banks during the years 1934 and 1935, after declines in these items in 1932 and 1933, are indications of definite steps toward recovery in banking.

"Based on figures assembled for total state supervised banks on resources and liabilities as of December 31, 1931 to 1935, it is noted: (1) that deposits in 1935 rose approximately 12 per cent over the previous year, as compared with an increase of about 9 per cent in 1934 over the year 1933, and declines of 7 per cent and 12 per cent in 1933 and 1932, respectively, from the preceding years of 1932 and 1931; and (2) that total invested funds increased by approximately 2 per cent in 1935 and also in 1934, while they had decreased by 9 per cent in 1933 and by 11 per cent in 1932."

Analysis Shows Stronger Positions

In a survey and analysis of earnings and expenses of state banks doing a commercial business, it is brought out that in a majority of states they have increased their earning ability during 1935. On the basis of data covering 7,928 banks in 42 states, the report says:

"The most significant fact to be pointed out is that new profits of state banks—after deducting charge-offs on loans, investments, etc., and adding recoveries—were shown in 37 of the 42 states which reported in 1935, in comparison with net profits in only 11 of the 35 states reporting in 1934. Measured in terms of dollars per each $100 of invested funds, net profits in 1935 ranged between $2.40 and $.10 per $100, with 19 states showing profits of $1.00, or over, per $100; while in 1934 net profits did not exceed $1.20 per $100 and only three states showed profits of $1.00, or over."

The report contains voluminous tables showing the resources and liabilities of all classes of state chartered institutions and detailed analyses of earnings and expenses by states and of insured commercial state banks grouped by size of banks.

Bankers Help Farmers

The conviction that 4-H Club work lays the foundation for sound citizenship and intelligent farming influenced a New York City bank executive to contribute $500 to the Agricultural Committee of the State Bankers Association, to further 4-H Club activities in the state. "I am convinced that the work is so worthy, and is being so well handled that it should interest those who believe in building sound citizenship, as well as intelligent farming for the future," he said.

Unusual prominence was given this past year to agricultural work by the Tennessee Bankers Association. The Agricultural Committee report reveals hearty cooperation between bankers and extension workers. "Key bankers and county agents have been in closer contact than ever before," it says.

Georgia bankers have given both moral and financial backing to a Marketing Project sponsored by the Extension Service of the College of Agriculture, and activities the past year showed significant results. The phases of the Marketing program emphasized in the year's work are: The retail curb market; roadside marketing; miscellaneous marketing (suited to the locality); bartering (exchange of commodities or services with neighbors); standardized canned products for sale prepared in homes or canning centers.

McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed-Gear Mower

WE are anxious to have all of our friends see the New McCormick-Deering No. 7 Enclosed-Gear Mower. We think it is one of the finest pieces of farm equipment we have ever sold!

Everybody who has seen it says they never had any idea that a mower could be built as this one is.

For example: The entire operating mechanism, including drive gears, differential, and countershafts, is assembled compactly in an oil-tight gear housing and runs in a bath of oil. There are four high-grade roller bearings. Operation is so smooth and noiseless that you can scarcely hear the light hum of the sickle!

Special oil seals at the ends of the main axle and flywheel shaft, and the oil-tight gear box prevent leakage and protect all working parts against the entrance of dirt and other abrasive materials. Floating action of cutter bar provides ample play without disturbing knife registration.

Miss Marjorie Dusek Becomes Bride of Moray Walker Gunn Here Sunday

Immediately following the eleven o'clock service at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, the marriage of Miss Marjorie Dusek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dusek to Moray Walker Gunn, took place with Rev. O. C. Acrey reading the ring ceremony.

Floor vases filled with mammoth zenias in pastel shades and queens crown were silhouted against potted ferns to form the altar decorations, which acted also as the setting for the bridal party. As no previous announcement had been made the marriage came as a surprise to all present. The bride wore a formal gown of brown taffeta, the long skirt carrying the fullness in pleated ruffles fashioned at the back, short ruffled sleeves and basque waist with an upstanding cuff outlining the neck. Hoover roses and fern.

The bride's only attendant, Mrs. W. She carried a shower bouquet of of honor, wore a lace gown in orchid shade with purple accessories and F. Germer of Port Lavaca as matron carried an arm bouquet of purple asters.

Edward Maxey of Austin served as best man. Robert Smith gave the bridal music, and by request of the groom very softly rendered "Perfect Day" as the ceremony was performed.

The bride was reared in Cameron and is known for her beautiful character. She attended State University at Austin for four years receiving the B. A. Degree in 1935. Her charming personality made her a favorite during her college years. She taught English in High School at Snook the past year.

The groom attended a preparatory school in Tennessee then Ferman University of Greenville, S. C., the University of Texas for a special course and recieved his B. S. degree from Duke University where he studied in preparation for his present position. He is a Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity.

Weak and emaciated by his long vigil, the dog was humanely put to death.

HOW THE BANKS AID THE GOVERNMENT

Normal and Emergency Needs Met by Advances of Commercial Banking Credit

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The American commercial banking credit system is an absolute essential in the financial operations of business and government, Harold G. Moulton, President of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., said here recently in an address before the Graduate School of Banking conducted under the joint auspices of Rutgers University and the American Bankers Association.

If the flexibility and expansibility provided by commercial banking credit were eliminated, Dr. Moulton declared, "it is scarcely too much to say that the economic system itself would shortly be destroyed.

"Normally the amount of credit extended by commercial banks to the government is small in amount and for the purpose mainly of financing temporary requirements in anticipation of tax collections or bond sales. But in periods of war and acute depression, when the financial requirements of government expand with great rapidity, the expansion of commercial bank credit is on a tremendous scale. Such is the case at the present time.

How Public Needs Are Financed

"The purchase of government securities by individuals and by the commercial banks provides the government with the means by which its manifold activities are financed. The Treasury obtains the funds, with which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other government credit agencies finance their operations, through the sale of securities, largely to commercial banks. These funds, in turn, have gone to the assistance of distressed banks and other financial institutions, to aid industrial and agricultural enterprises, to finance new public and private capital construction, and to provide relief to the unemployed."

Dr. Moulton declared that it is not true that the world depression was caused by a breakdown of the American banking system "which did not, in fact, occur until the depression had been under way for more than three years." He added:

"Nor is it true that the world maladjustments existing in 1929 can be explained simply by undue extensions of commercial banking credit in the preceding years. These maladjustments involved world agricultural, industrial, commercial and financial relations."

FARM ACCOUNTING REVEALS LESSONS

Principles of Sound Business Management That Apply to All Farms

An analysis made of detailed records kept by a group of Wisconsin farms revealed several important lessons and the principles of sound business management derived from them apply equally well to other farms, says an article in the Bulletin of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association. The article says:

"Investment costs, including interest, depreciation, repairs, taxes and insurance, are approximately two-thirds of all farm costs. Furthermore, these costs are largely independent of the production program of the farm.

"This means that if a farmer cuts his production of crops or livestock, he increases his investment costs per unit of product produced, as a smaller number of units must then carry as large an expense load as before. This illustrates the importance, from the standpoint of costs, of operating a farm at or near capacity.

"Investment mistakes are more costly than many others because they cannot easily be corrected. If a farmer pays too much for his farm, his investment costs will be abnormally high as long as he owns it. If he constructs a $4,000 barn, when a $2,000 barn would have served his purpose, he will have excessive barn costs, year after year, during the entire service life of the structure.

"This emphasizes the importance of a knowledge of investment values and the specific investment requirements of individual farms.

Determining Real or False Economies

"In working for greater economy, it is essential that the farm manager be able to distinguish between a real and a false saving. This can be done only through a careful estimate of the contribution to income, over a period of time, of each item of expenditure. Only if more is saved in expense than will be lost in income, can a contemplated cut in expense be designated as a real saving.

"For example, dropping dairy herd improvement work may result in a yearly expense reduction. The question to decide is what effect the dropping of this work will have on the present and future income from the dairy herd. If the estimated loss in livestock receipts due to a lowered efficiency in feeding and breeding is greater than the original saving, then it would obviously be a false economy.

"Substantial savings can be effected on many farms through the use of more home grown garden produce and farm cured meats. Why pay out money for products of this kind that can be produced much cheaper at home? The money saved from the family food budget can be used for the purchase of many things that will make the farm home a more comfortable and pleasant place to live."

Six Alarms Sounded for Baltimore Factory Fire

Most of Baltimore's fire fighting apparatus was called to battle a conflagration in a factory which followed a terrific explosion. The blaze was especially hazardous because the building was occupied by firms engaged in the manufacture of highly inflammable materials.

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Hallsville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramping. My pain would be so intense it would nauseate me. I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'doless.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me." . . . If Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.

AMERICAN BOY OFFERS WORLD OF ADVENTURE

And there'll be Roscoe Turner's inside story of the famous London-to-Melbourne air race.

There'll be advice on hobbies, sports tips from famous coaches and players, suggestions on money-earning and low cost travel, and articles on dog training, nature's oddities and tomorrow's airplanes.

There'll be stories about the favorite characters of a million boys—Bonehead Tierney, detective; Square Jaw Davis, engineer; Hide-rack, the red-gold collie; Alan Kane, scientist; and Lee, midshipman.

Senator Gore was called out of retirement six years ago by a heavy vote.

NAIL IN LUNG OF CHILD 18 MONTHS SAFELY REMOVED

Three-Year Old Australian Boy Travels 9,000 Miles to Get Relief.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Less than 24 hours after three-year-old Kelvin Rogers arrived here from Australia, a nail that had been lodged in his lung for a year and a half was removed at Temple university hospital in a seven minute operation.

The boy made the 9,000 mile journey with his mother after physicians in his native land had tried twice, without success, to remove the three-inch wire nail he accidentally inhaled.

Operation Delicate One.

The operation was performed in the clinic of Dr. Chevalier Jackson, famed inventor of the perfected bronchoscope. One of his instruments and a biplane fluoroscope were used in the delicate task. The nail was in the lower part of the right lung.

The tiny electric light was used to permit the surgeon to see the inside of the lung, somewhat in the manner of an X-ray, so he could attach small forceps to the nail and remove it.

Surgeons formerly removed foreign bodies from the lungs and bronchial tubes by making incisions. The mortality rate was high. Perfection of the Jackson bronchoscope and the technique for its use have now made the operation bloodless.

Before the operation is performed the position of the foreign object is usually studied by X-ray. Sometimes its position requires a change in the shape of the instrument to be used or a special curve in the tube. All these requirements are studied before the operation is undertaken.

Anesthetic Not Used

Because the patient must breathe through the tube inserted in his throat, a general anesthetic is not given. Narcotics are used to deaden feelings in the throat and decrease respiration.

Then the metal tube is inserted in the mouth. A tiny electric light is lowered into the tube and a special eye piece permits the surgeon to see the object for which he is probing.

Special forceps meet every type of requirement.

The slender forceps are inserted in the tube. With them the surgeon manipulates the object into position and draws it into the mouth of the tube. The bronchoscope is then withdrawn, carrying the object with it.

Hindu Uses Hypnotism in Holdups on Riviera

Nice, France.—A Hindu's hypnotic holdups with an "all-powerful eye" which leads cashiers and clerks to pay without a murmur is mystifying the French Riviera.

A Hindu magician strolled into a travel office, gazed at the cashier until he submitted to his will and handed over 4,000 francs (about $275) from the till.

"I could not resist his eyes," the cashier told the police.

On another occasion, the Hindu walked into a bank, threw a bundle of banknotes on the counter and asked the cashier to change them for a note of large denomination. The cashier found there were 100 francs more than the Hindu had said.

"You are an honest man," the Hindu said, "and as a reward I will read your hand."

The cashier said the Hindu took his left hand, gazed into his eyes, and began ordering him to take money out of the cash box.

"I felt I suddenly lost all my will-power," he said, "and it was only five minutes after he had gone that I recalled I had given him money. I was hypnotized."

A cashier in a hotel at Cannes told a similar story. The Hindu just gazed at him and he gave up $80, all there was in the till.

The Hindu even hypnotized a Riviera barman into giving him a drink without paying.

Dead Woman Wins Suit in French Law Courts

Nice.—To a dead woman has been awarded more than $1,250 damages against a dead man in the French law courts.

The woman was Mme. Paulette Revertegat of Antibes. She sued Vincent Lombardi, a plumber, whose lorry smashed into her car in 1928.

The action was started soon after the accident, but the law moves slowly and three years later the woman died—as the result of her injuries, it was asserted. Then the plumber also died, death being from natural causes.

Now, at last, judgment has been given. It upholds the dead woman's claim, and the plumber's widow must pay Mme. Revertegat's heirs $1,250, plus interest from the time of the accident.

WOMAN'S AMOROUS BOOK IS TOO REAL, COURT'S DECISION

Young Wife's Love Novel Is Based on Experience; Husband Wins Case.

Columbus, Ohio.—An attractive young wife's alleged fictional lovers, who paraded in amorous succession through the pages of her maiden effort as a novelist, were declared real flesh and blood by a court which awarded her wealthy husband a divorce on ground that the novel was autobiographical.

In a sensational divorce trial, the court of domestic relations concluded its hearing of Mrs. Constance Hill's torrid attempt at novel writing and ruled in favor of her husband, Frederick Hill, manufacturer.

Denies Reality.

The award was based on Hill's charges that personal experience, rather than imagination and wishfulfillment, had guided his wife's pen through the pages of her spicy book, "Bedded Fires." Mrs. Hill emphatically denied that her characters were real.

The aspiring authoress denied on the witness stand that Thomas H. Uzzell, New York literary critic, was one of the three big moments in her love life. Relative to this point, Hill's attorney queried Mrs. Hill as follows:

"Isn't it a fact that the great lovers of your manuscript were not imaginary but in reality Thomas H. Uzzell, Dr. Palmer L. Cordray and the late Joseph R. Ha ue?"

"They are not."

Uzzell, former magazine fiction editor, entered no denial, nor was he called by either side. Hill's charges were that his wife had followed to the letter each of Uzzell's preachments to the effect that to write well "was to write of reality." Hill's attorney read from "Bedded Fires":

"At last I have found the perfect lover. He is not a Casanova, not a Don Juan, but a perfectly normal man; mature; not violent but assured. He is adequate and strong, yet quite gentle.

Other Men.

"There have been other men, of course, or how should I know the difference? I resent their lovemaking now. I never did before as I passed from one to the other. I must have some notions of faithfulness! I, the least faithful of women."

Husband Hill, who paid Uzzell a fee for instructing his wife in literary arts, had reason for believing that the book was autobiographical when he read this in it:

"There was a husband in my life to whom I have been consistently adulterous. We met when we were both in school, at a dance. I had a certain fresh beauty in those days and I knew the full effect of blue velvet against a clear white skin."

At this Hill whispered to his attorney:

"She had on a sapphire blue dress the first time I met her."

Mrs. Hill attended Radcliffe college while her husband was a student at Harvard.

The spicy testimony was climaxed by a settlement, terms of which were kept secret.

Princess Elopes With Bellhop; Stirs Balkans

Athens.—A few hours after eloping with Anastasius Charalambos, a Greek bellhop, Princess Assa, eldest daughter of the late King Feisal of Iraq and sister of the present king, Ghazi I, locked herself in her hotel suite with her husband and refused entrance even to members of the royal suite.

The thirty-year-old princess married Charalambos, who though Greek born, is an Italian subject, after meeting him on the Island of Rhodes, where he was employed at the hotel where the Iraq party stayed. The marriage has provoked a Balkan stir.

Princess Assa refused admission even to her sister, Princess Rajihah, who is a year younger, turning a deaf ear to pleas that the royal suite wanted to "interview" Charalambos. Princess Assa disavowed the Mohammedan faith before the marriage and embraced the creed of the Greek Orthodox church.

Canadian Mounted Hunts Girl Lost for 28 Years

Winnipeg, Man.—Royal Canadian Mounted police have resumed the twenty-eight-year-old search for Olive Dupraw.

Olive, then a girl of eight, vanished while on a train journey from Fort William to Kenora, Ont., on June 18, 1908. No trace of her has ever been found until recently, when Royal Canadian Mounted police headquarters here received a letter from an Alberta farmer, who said he saw a woman a few weeks ago whom he believed to be the lost Olive Dupraw.

20c Ginning To All

I am managing the R. L. Batte Round Bale Gin for the coming season and it has always been the policy of this gin to gin for the same price set by all the other Cameron gins for ginning. This was justice for all, but for several years, we found out later, that there were special concessions made by some ginners, such as paying for hauling to their gins; hauling cotton themselves for certain customers free; loaning trailers, etc., that caused us to lose customers. We have decided to make the low price of 20c per 100 pounds for ginning any and all seed cotton brought to our gin and to meet all competition at a lower price for ginning should any one decide to gin cheaper and assure you that we will keep seed prices up as high as the highest. Bagging and ties will be furnished at a competitive price and may be cheaper. All cotton will be delivered to the yards and compress free. Will give you quick and efficient service. It is not our intention to run a cut-throat business, but to gin for all farmers at the price given by others to a favored few. Bring me your ginning.

The main characteristics of the real people of our country can be about as well discerned at these county fairs as at any function of our national life. There one sees the result of the persistent and indomitable industry of our people. The fatness of these cattle, the neatness of those wholesome hogs, the richness of those pumpkins and grapes, these are among the signs of untiring labor.

American alertness there appears in the inventive ideas presented at educational exhibits, showing the work of scientific agriculture and our school system.
